8 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

9 Plaintiff,

10 v.

11 DIANA JIMENEZ-BERMUDEZ,

12 Defendant.

CASE NO. 07cr1372 JAH

AMENDED ORDER DENYING DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE INDICTMENT

14 Defendant Diana Jimenez-Bermudez has filed a Motion to Dismiss the Indictment 15 Due to Erroneous Grand Jury Instruction. For the reasons discussed below, Defendant's 16 motion is DENIED.

17 I. BACKGROUND

18 On February 28, 2007, a federal grand jury empaneled in this district on January 19 11, 2007 returned a two-count Indictment charging Defendant with Importation of 20 Methamphetamine, in violation of 21 U.S.C. §§ 952 and 960, and Possession of 21 Methamphetamine with Intent to Distribute, in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1).

22 II. CHALLENGED INSTRUCTIONS<sup>1</sup>

23 A. Voir Dire Session

24 Before commencing voir dire, the empaneling judge, the Hon. Larry A. Burns, 25 explained the function of the grand jury to the prospective jurors as follows: "The grand 26

27 <sup>1</sup>In her reply brief, Defendant makes a passing reference to the fact that the grand 28 jurors were shown a video presentation on the role of the grand jury, however there is no substantive challenge to the use of the video, and thus use of the video will not be discussed in depth herein.

1 jury is determining really two factors: ‘Do we have a reasonable – collectively, do we have 2 a reasonable belief that a crime was committed? And second, do we have a reasonable 3 belief that the person that they propose that we indict committed the crime?’ If the 4 answer is ‘yes’ to both of those, then the case should move forward. If the answer to either 5 of the questions is ‘no,’ then the grand jury should hesitate and not indict.” App. 2 to 6 Gov’t Response at 8.

7 During voir dire, Judge Burns explained to the potential grand jurors that the 8 presentation of the evidence to the grand jury was going to be one-sided. Id. at 14.
 9 However, Judge Burns stated, “Now, having told you that, my experience is that the 10 prosecutors don’t play hide-the-ball. If there’s something adverse or that cuts against the 11 charge, you’ll be informed of that. They have a duty to do that.” Id. at 14-15.

12 One prospective juror, a retired clinical social worker, indicated that he did not 13 believe that any drugs should be considered illegal. Id. at 16. He also stated that he had 14 strong feelings about immigration cases and thought the government was spending a lot 15 of time unnecessarily persecuting people. Id. The following exchange occurred:

16 The Court: Now, the question is can you fairly evaluate those cases? Just 17 as the Defendant ultimately is entitled to a fair trial and the person that’s 18 accused is entitled to a fair appraisal of the evidence of the case that’s in 19 front of you, so, too, is the United States entitled to a fair judgment. If 20 there’s probable cause, then the case should go forward. I wouldn’t want you to say, “Well, yeah, there’s probable cause. But I still don’t like what our Government is doing. I disagree with these laws, so I’m not going to vote for it to go forward.” If that’s your frame of mind, then probably you shouldn’t serve. Only you can tell me that.

21 Prospective Juror: Well, I think I may fall in that category.

22 The Court: In the latter category?

23 Prospective Juror: Yes.

24 The Court: Where it would be difficult for you to support a charge even if 25 you thought the evidence warranted it?

26 Prospective Juror: Yes.

27 The Court: I’m going to excuse you, then. I appreciate your honest answers.

28 Id. at 16-17.

Later, another prospective juror, a real estate agent, expressed a concern regarding

1 the disparity between state and federal law with respect to medical marijuana. Judge 2 Burns responded:

3 Well, those things – the consequences of your determination shouldn't 4 concern you in the sense that penalties or punishment, things like that – we 5 tell trial jurors, of course, that they cannot consider the punishment or the 6 consequence that Congress has set for these things. We'd ask you to also 7 abide by that. We want you to make a business-like decision and look at the 8 facts and make a determination of whether there was a [sic] probable cause.

9 Id. at 25.

10 Subsequently, the prospective juror stated that he felt that drugs should be legal and 11 that rapists and murderers, not people using drugs, should go to jail. Id. at 25-26. The 12 following exchange ensued:

13 The Court: I think rapists and murderers ought to go to jail too. It's not for 14 me as a judge to say what the law is. We elect legislators to do that. We're 15 sort of at the end of the pipe on that. We're charged with enforcing the laws 16 that Congress gives us.

17 I can tell you sometimes I don't agree with some of the legal decisions 18 that are indicated that I have to make. But my alternative is to vote for 19 someone different, vote for someone that supports the policies I support and 20 get the law changed. It's not for me to say, "Well, I don't like it. So I'm not 21 going to follow it here."

22 You'd have a similar obligation as a grand juror even though you 23 might have to grit your teeth on some cases. Philosophically, if you were a 24 member of congress, you'd vote against, for example, criminalizing 25 marijuana. I don't know if that's it but you'd vote against criminalizing 26 some drugs.

27 That's not what your prerogative is here. Your prerogative instead is 28 to act like a judge and to say, "All right. This is what I've got to deal with objectively. Does it seem to me that a crime was committed? Yes. Does it seem to me that this person's involved? It does." And then your obligation, if you find those things to be true, would be to vote in favor of the case going forward.

I can understand if you tell me, "Look, I get all that, but I just can't do it or I wouldn't do it." I don't know what your frame of mind is. You have to tell me about that.

Prospective Juror: I'm not comfortable with it.

The Court: Do you think you'd be inclined to let people go on drug cases even though you were convinced there was probable cause they committed a drug offense?

Prospective Juror: It would depend upon the case.

The Court: Is there a chance that you would do that?

Prospective Juror: Yes.

The Court: I appreciate your answers. I'll excuse you at this time.

1 Id. at 26-28.

2 Later, a potential juror said that he was “soft” on immigration because he had done 3 volunteer work with immigrants in the field, but that he could be fair and objective. Judge 4 Burns stated: “As you heard me explain earlier to one of the prospective grand jurors, we’re 5 not about trying to change people’s philosophies and attitudes here. That’s not my 6 business. But what I have to insist on is that you follow the law that’s given to us by the 7 United States Congress. We enforce the federal laws here.” Id. at 61. This juror was not 8 excused.

9 B. Charge to Impaneled Grand Jury

10 After the grand jury was impaneled, Judge Burns gave further instructions regarding 11 the responsibilities of the grand jurors.

12 With respect to the enforcement of federal laws, Judge Burns explained:

13 But it’s not for you to judge the wisdom of the criminal laws enacted 14 by Congress; that is, whether or not there should be a federal law or should 15 not be a federal law designating certain activity is [sic] criminal is not up to 16 you. That’s a judgment that Congress makes.

17 And if you disagree with that judgment made by Congress, then your 18 option is not to say, ‘Well, I’m going to vote against indicting even though 19 I think that the evidence is sufficient’ or ‘I’m going to vote in favor of 20 [indictment] even though the evidence may be insufficient.’ Instead, your 21 obligation is to contact your congressman or advocate for a change in the 22 laws, but not to bring your personal definition of what the law ought to be 23 and try to impose that through applying it in a grand jury setting.

24 Furthermore, when you’re deciding whether to indict or not to indict, 25 you shouldn’t be concerned with punishment that attaches to the charge.
26 I think I also alluded to this in the conversation with one gentleman. Judges 27 alone determine punishment. We tell trial juries in criminal cases that 28 they’re not to be concerned with the matter of punishment either. Your obligation at the end of the day is to make a business-like decision on facts and apply those facts to the law as it’s explained and read to you.

App. 1 to Gov’t Response at 8-9.

23 With respect to exculpatory evidence, Judge Burns stated: “As I told you, in most 24 instances, the U.S. Attorneys are duty-bound to present evidence that cuts against what 25 they may be asking you to do if they’re aware of that evidence.” Id. at 20. Later, Judge 26 Burns said, “If past experience is any indication of what to expect in the future, then you 27 can expect that the U.S. Attorneys that will appear in front of you will be candid, they’ll 28 be honest, that they’ll act in good faith in all matters presented to you.” Id. at 27.

III. DISCUSSION

A. Instructions Re: Role of Grand Jury

Defendant contends that Judge Burns' instructions and the dismissal of two potential jurors deprived Defendant of the traditional functioning of the Grand Jury. Specifically, Defendant claims that the challenged statements in combination with the dismissal of the two potential jurors "flatly prohibited grand jurors from exercising their constitutional discretion to not indict even if probable cause supports the charge." (Def.'s Reply Br. 8.) Looking at the instructions as a whole, the Court disagrees.

Judge Burns made it clear that the jurors were not to refuse to indict in the face of probable cause on the ground that they disagreed with Congress's decision to criminalize certain activity. Judge Burns did not err in doing so. In United States v. Navarro-Vargas, 408 F.3d 1184 (9th Cir. 2005) ("Navarro-Vargas II"), the Ninth Circuit upheld the model grand jury instruction that states: "You cannot judge the wisdom of the criminal laws enacted by Congress, that is, whether or not there should or should not be a federal law designating certain activity as criminal. That is to be determined by Congress and not by you." The majority opinion observed that the instruction was not contrary to any long-standing historical practice surrounding the grand jury and noted that shortly after the adoption of the Bill of Rights, federal judges charged grand juries with a duty to submit to the law and to strictly enforce it. Id. at 1193, 1202-03. "We cannot say that the grand jury's power to judge the wisdom of the laws is so firmly established that the district court must either instruct the jury on its power to nullify the laws or remain silent." Id. at 1204.

A prohibition against judging the wisdom of the criminal laws enacted by Congress amounts to the same thing as a prohibition against refusing to indict based on disagreement with the laws. It is true that Judge Burns used stronger language that, viewed in isolation, could be misconstrued as requiring the return of an indictment in all cases where probable cause can be found. Particularly troubling is the following statement made to the real estate agent: "Your prerogative instead is to act like a judge and to say, 'All right. This is what I've got to deal with objectively. Does it seem to me that a crime

1 was committed? Yes. Does it seem to me that this person's involved? It does.' And then 2 your obligation, if you find those things to be true, would be to vote in favor of the case going 3 forward." App. 2 to Gov't Response at 26. However, viewed in context, Judge Burns was 4 not mandating the issuance of an indictment in all cases where probable cause is found; 5 he was explaining that disagreement with the laws should not be an obstacle to the 6 issuance of an indictment.<sup>2</sup>

7 Furthermore, the word "obligation" is not materially different than the word 8 "should." In Navarro-Vargas II, the majority opinion held that the model instruction that 9 the jurors "should" indict if they find probable cause does not violate the grand jury's 10 independence. The majority explained, "As a matter of pure semantics, it does not 11 'eliminate discretion on the part of the grand jurors,' leaving room for the grand jury to 12 dismiss even if it finds probable cause." Navarro-Vargas II, 408 F.3d at 1205 (quoting 13 United States v. Marcucci, 299 F.3d 1156, 1159 (9th Cir. 2002)). The dissenting opinion 14 notes that the word "should" is used "to express a duty [or] obligation." Id. at 1121 15 (quoting The Oxford American Diction And Language Guide 931 (1999)) (emphasis 16 added).<sup>3</sup>

17 Defendant also argues that Judge Burns improperly forbade the grand jury from 18 considering the potential punishment for crimes when deciding whether or not to indict.
 19 Defendant relies on the following statement:

20 Well, those things – the consequences of your determination shouldn't 21 concern you in the sense that penalties or punishment, things like that – we tell trial jurors, of course, that they cannot consider the punishment or the

 23 <sup>2</sup> The Supreme Court has recognized that a grand jury is not required to indict in every case where probable cause exists. In Vasquez v. Hillery, 474 U.S. 254, 263 (1986), 24 the Supreme Court explained: "The grand jury does not determine only that probable cause exists to believe that a defendant committed a crime, or that it does not. In the 25 hands of the grand jury lies the power to charge a greater offense or a lesser offense; numerous counts or a single count; and perhaps most significant of all, a capital offense 26 or a noncapital offense - all on the basis of the same facts. Moreover, '[t]he grand jury is not bound to indict in every case where a conviction can be obtained.' United States v.
 27 Ciambrone, 601 F.2d 616, 629 (2d Cir. 1979) (Friendly, J., dissenting)."

28 <sup>3</sup> Defendant concedes that at other times Judge Burns instructed that upon a finding of probable cause, the case "should" go forward. App. 2 to Gov't Response at 8, 17; App.
 1 to Gov't Response at 4, 23.

1 consequence that Congress has set for these things. We'd ask you to also abide 2 by that. We want you to make a business-like decision and look at the facts and make a determination of whether there was a probable cause.

3 App. 2 to Gov't Response at 25. (Emphasis added.) Although Judge Burns stated that 4 trial jurors cannot consider punishment, he did not impose such a restriction on the grand 5 jurors. Instead, Judge Burns requested that the grand jurors follow the same principle.
6 Similarly, during the formal charge, Judge Burns stated, "[y]ou shouldn't be concerned with 7 punishment that attaches to the charge." App. 1 to Gov't Response at 8. (Emphasis 8 added.)

9 In United States v. Cortez-Rivera, 454 F.3d 1038 (9th Cir. 2006), the Ninth 10 Circuit upheld a jury instruction that stated: "[W]hen deciding whether or not to indict, 11 you should not be concerned about punishment in the event of conviction; judges alone 12 determine punishment." (Emphasis added.) Consistent with the reasoning in Marcucci 13 and Navarro-Vargas II, the Ninth Circuit held that the instruction did not place an 14 absolute bar on considering punishment and was therefore constitutional. The 15 instructions given by Judge Burns regarding the consideration of punishment were 16 substantially the same as the instruction in Cortez-Rivera.

17 Judge Burns did not pronounce a general prohibition against jurors exercising their 18 discretion to refuse to return an indictment in the face of probable cause. In any case, 19 "history demonstrates that grand juries do not derive their independence from a judge's 20 instruction. Instead they derive their independence from an unreviewable power to decide 21 whether to indict or not." Navarro-Vargas II, 408 F.3d at 1204.

22 Judge Burns informed the jurors about the utmost secrecy of the grand jury 23 proceedings and their deliberations. In addition, a video shown to the potential grand 24 jurors titled, "The Federal Grand Jury: The People's Panel," which was intended to educate 25 potential grand jurors about their responsibilities as grand jurors, also informed the jurors 26 of the secrecy of the proceedings. Judge Burns and the video also emphasized to the jury 27 that they were independent of the Government and did not have to return an indictment 28 just because the Assistant U.S. Attorney asked them to. Judge Burns characterized the 1 jury as “a buffer between our Government’s ability to accuse someone of a crime and then 2 putting that person through the burden of standing trial.” App. 1 to Gov’t Response at 3 26. Judge Burns also told the jurors that they were not to be a “rubber stamp” and were 4 expected to depend on their independent judgment. Id. at 27.

5 Even though the jurors were not explicitly instructed that they could use their 6 discretion to refuse to return an indictment, they retained that power by virtue of the 7 secrecy surrounding their deliberations and the unreviewability of their decisions. Nothing 8 that Judge Burns said or did impinged on the jurors’ independence in this regard.

9 Defendant counters that the dismissal of the two potential jurors undermined the 10 grand jury’s independence from the very start. According to Defendant, when Judge Burns 11 dismissed the jurors, the message was clear that they were to indict in every case where 12 there was probable cause or they would be excused. Defendant contends that the 13 remaining grand jurors could not have understood Judge Burns’ actions in any other way.
14 (Reply Br. 18.) The Court disagrees.

15 Upon reading the voir dire transcript, it is apparent that the jurors were excused 16 because they were biased against the government with respect to a whole category of 17 criminal laws, not simply because they were independent-minded and might refuse to 18 return an indictment in a case where probable cause exists. Judge Burns explained to the 19 clinical social worker, “We’re all products of our experience. We’re not going to try to 20 disabuse you of experiences or judgments that you have. What we ask is that you not 21 allow those to control invariably the outcome of the cases coming in front of you; that you 22 look at the cases fresh, you evaluate the circumstances, listen to the witness testimony, and 23 then make an independent judgment.” App. 2 to Gov’t Response at 15. Judge Burns 24 excused the social worker after he admitted that it would be difficult for him to return an 25 indictment in drug or immigration cases.

26 Similarly, the real estate agent expressed that he thought drugs should be legal and 27 that people using drugs should not be sent to jail. App. 2 to Gov’t Response at 25-26.
28 The real estate agent said that he was not comfortable with indicting in drug cases.

1 Although he did not say that he would refuse to indict in all cases involving drugs, he 2 admitted that because of his beliefs, there was a chance that he would refuse to return an 3 indictment in a drug case even though there was probable cause. Id. at 27. The real estate 4 agent's responses established that he had serious concerns regarding the criminalization 5 of drugs and could not be impartial with respect to these cases

6 That bias was the reason for the dismissal of the first two potential jurors is 7 confirmed by the dismissal of a third potential juror. This juror stated that he had a 8 strong bias for the Government. App. 2 to Gov't Response at 38. Judge Burns cautioned 9 the juror that he should not "automatically defer to [the Government] or surrender the 10 function and give the indictment decision to the U.S. Attorney. You have to make that 11 independently." Id. at 40. Judge Burns emphasized once again the responsibility of the 12 jurors to evaluate the facts of each case independently based on the evidence presented.
13 Id. at 42-43. Demonstrating his even-handedness, Judge Burns explained, "I'm equally 14 concerned with somebody who would say, 'I'm going to automatically drop the trap door 15 on anybody the U.S. Attorney asks.' I wouldn't want you to do that." Id. at 44.

16 A reasonable grand juror would not have interpreted the dismissal of the first two 17 potential jurors as a message that they must indict in all cases where probable cause is 18 found or risk being excused from service. It was apparent to the other jurors that a lack 19 of impartiality with respect to certain types of cases, not independence, was the reason for 20 all three dismissals.

21 In sum, Judge Burns did not err in instructing the grand jurors that they were not 22 to refuse to return an indictment on the ground that they disagreed with the laws.
23 Furthermore, nothing in the video or Judge Burns' instructions nullified the grand jury's 24 inherent power to refuse to indict for any reason whatsoever. As the Ninth Circuit noted 25 in Navarro-Vargas II, 408 F.3d at 1204, the grand jury's independence results from the 26 secrecy of their deliberations and the unreviewability of their decisions. Nothing in the 27 record shows any impediment to that independence.

28 B. Instructions re: Assistant U.S. Attorneys

1 Defendant also contends that Judge Burns committed structural error by making 2 comments about the Assistant U.S. Attorney's duty to present evidence that "cuts against 3 the charge." According to Defendant, not only did Judge Burns' comments contradict 4 United States v. Williams, 504 U.S. 36 (1992), but also discouraged independent 5 investigation, leading to inaccurate probable cause determinations. Defendant reasons 6 that given Judge Burns' comments, the grand jurors would have assumed that if the 7 prosecutor did not present any exculpatory evidence, then none exists, rendering further 8 investigation a waste of time.

9 Under Williams, prosecutors do not have a duty to present substantial exculpatory 10 evidence to the grand jury. Although Assistant U.S. Attorneys apparently have an 11 employment duty to disclose "substantial evidence that directly negates the guilt" of a 12 subject of investigation (United States Attorneys' Manual § 9-11.233), it does not appear 13 that they have a broad duty to disclose all evidence that may be deemed exculpatory or 14 adverse to the Government's position.

15 Accordingly, Judge Burns' comments regarding the duty of Assistant U.S. Attorneys 16 to present adverse evidence were inaccurate. However, Judge Burns' comments do not rise 17 to the level of structural error. As discussed above, the video and Judge Burns stressed that 18 the grand jury was independent of the Government. The video and Judge Burns also 19 explained to the jury that they could direct the Assistant U.S. Attorney to subpoena 20 additional documents or witnesses. App. 1 to Gov't Response at 11, 24. The jurors were 21 also told about their right to pursue their own investigation, even if the Assistant U.S.
22 Attorney disagrees with the grand jury's decision to pursue the subject. Id. at 12.

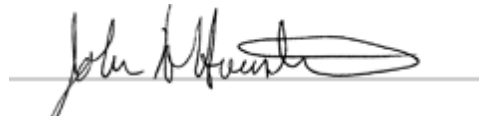

23 In light of the foregoing instructions, the Court does not agree that the grand jurors 24 would assume that if the Government did not present any exculpatory evidence, none 25 exists. A reasonable juror would understand that the Assistant U.S. Attorney may not be 26 aware of certain exculpatory evidence, whether due to legitimate circumstances or 27 inadequate investigation, and that further investigation by the grand jury may be needed 28 to properly evaluate the evidence before them. Furthermore, Judge Burns told the jury

1 that “in most instances” the U.S. Attorneys are duty-bound to present exculpatory 2 evidence. App. 1 to Gov’t Response at 20. Based on this qualifying language, the grand 3 jurors would have understood that the prosecutor is not always bound to present 4 exculpatory evidence. Thus, “the structural protections of the grand jury” have not “been 5 so compromised as to render the proceedings fundamentally unfair.” Bank of Nova Scotia 6 v. United States, 487 U.S. 250, 257 (1988).

7 IV. CONCLUSION

8 For the reasons discussed above, Defendant’s Motion to Dismiss the Indictment 9 Due to Erroneous Grand Jury Instruction is DENIED.
